

DSU Puts Its Heart into Haiti Relief Effort

Posted: January 22, 2010

In the tragic wake of the massive January 12 earthquake in Haiti that has claimed the lives of thousands and left many others hungry and homeless, Delaware State University is coordinating several efforts to contribute to the ongoing worldwide relief effort.

Student Affairs has organized the Heart for Haiti committee, with representation from the Office of Student Leadership & Activities, student leaders and student health staff. DSU's Heart for Haiti endeavors are being manifested through several campus organizations as a natural expression of their capacity for compassion and outreach on a global level.

DSU President Dr. Harry L. Williams is not surprised by the student response to the earthquake in Haiti.

Dr. Williams stated "We are committed to educating our students toward the goal of making their mark on the world. It is gratifying to witness students actualizing this mantra as they mobilize the campus community to participate in this tremendous opportunity for global community service."

Student Government Association (SGA) President Kathleen Charlot, who also has Haitian roots said "Many students realize the importance of the role they can play in such a worldwide relief effort. We have a lot of international students at DSU who could be affected by disasters that happen throughout the world. It's our duty as students and citizens of the United States to care about people in other countries and to help people throughout the world when the need arises."
