How do I apply for federal, state and institutional aid?

Students can apply for financial aid each year by completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid beginning January 1st at www.FAFSA.gov [30] DSU's priority processing deadline is March 15th. We recommend you complete your taxes before you complete the FAFSA, but do not let the March 15th priority deadline pass. It is OK to use estimated income information to complete the FAFSA by March 15th. However, you must go back and update the FAFSA with actual tax data once your taxes are completed in order to receive a financial aid award letter.

New students should consult our "New Student Financial Aid Checklist" for a comprehensive explanation of how to apply for financial aid at Delaware State University by clicking on "Financial Assistance" above or visiting www.desu.edu/financialaid [31]. Returning student should review the "Financial Aid Timeline" for a month by month listing of financial aid deadlines by clicking on "Current Students" under the "Financial Assistance" link above.

Do I have to be admitted to Delaware State University in order to apply for financial aid?

No. Your FAFSA application can be completed before your acceptance into the University. However, you must actually be admitted before ANY aid can be offered or given to you. Some forms of aid that the University offers is based on your cost of attendance and may include scholarships, work-study and grant money.

Back to top [29]

How often do I have to apply for financial aid?

If you want federal, state, or institutional financial aid, you must complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid each year. The FAFSA is available on-line at www.FAFSA.gov [32] each year beginning January 1st for the next academic year. Delaware State University's priority deadline is March 15th.

Back to top [29]

Who determines how much aid I qualify for?

The Office of Financial Aid makes a determination of what kinds of aid to offer you and in what amounts based on information submitted by you on your FAFSA application as well as other forms you may be required to submit and your actual cost of attendance at the University.

Back to top [29]

Once it is determined that I am actually eligible for financial aid, when will my financial aid be awarded?

What should I do if the aid I am given is not enough to cover my costs of attendance?

Generally, financial aid will not cover all of your college costs. Students who do not receive adequate funding to pay their college cost of attendance should consider Parent PLUS loans, private/alternative loans and/or the University's Payment Plan.

For more information on the Parent PLUS Loan, click the "Federal Direct PLUS Loans" link under the "Financial Assistance" section above or follow this link: <http://www.desu.edu/financial-aid/federal-plus-loans> [34].

For more information on Alternative Loans, click the "Alternative Loans" link under the "Financial Assistance" section above or follow this link: <http://www.desu.edu/financial-aid/alternative-loans> [35]

For more information on the University payment plan, click the "NBS Monthly Payment" link under the "Financial Assistance" section above or follow this link: <http://www.desu.edu/financial-aid/nelnet-business-solutions-nbs-monthly-payment-plan> [36].

Back to top [29]

What is the difference between the grants and the scholarships that the University offers?

Grant money is funding that is disbursed based on eligibility and financial need toward your financial aid cost of attendance. These funds do NOT have to be repaid. Scholarships also do not require repayment; however, they most often are offered through outside agencies and groups and are awarded based on different criteria and affiliations. Delaware State University offers a number of scholarships. Please consult <http://www.desu.edu/scholarships> [37] for more information on scholarships and how to apply.

Back to top [29]

Do I need a Social Security Number in order to file my FAFSA?

The federal government DOES require all applicants to have a SSN when applying for aid. If you attempt to submit your application without one, it will be returned to you unprocessed and can possibly cause delays in your financial aid being completed.

Back to top [29]

What happens if I miss the March 15th deadline to submit my FAFSA? Is it too late for me to apply?

Missing the University's deadlines for submitting your financial aid information could result in difficulty having your aid in place for the fall semester in preparation for your attendance at the University.

But NO!, it is not too late for you to file your FAFSA application. You should complete your FAFSA as soon as possible. You may still attend the University, but you will need to make payment arrangements until your aid can be finalized. The Financial Aid Office will apply funding for which you are eligible retroactively to your account.

Back to top [29]

Do I have to wait until income tax forms for me and/or my parents are done before filing my FAFSA?

Every attempt should be made to have that information for your application as soon as possible, but your FAFSA application can be filed without your tax information using estimates of your income that are as CLOSE AS POSSIBLE to your actual income.

We recommend that you complete your taxes in February so that you can complete your FAFSA before March 15th with your accurate tax information. However, you should not miss the March 15th priority deadline waiting for your taxes to be completed. You can use estimated income on your FAFSA to meet the March 15th priority deadline, but you will have to go back and update your FAFSA with your tax data once you taxes are filed in order to receive a financial aid award. The Office of Financial Aid will not award any student who has estimated income on his or her FAFSA.

Back to top [29]

If I live with someone other than my parents, what income am I required to report?

Any cash support that you receive from the individual(s) with whom you reside does have to be reported on your FAFSA as UNTAXED income.

Back to top [29]

If the parent I live with is remarried, do I need my stepparent's tax information?

Yes, a dependent student who lives with a parent who is remarried IS required to include the stepparent's information.

Back to top [29]

If I am a student who is separated and filing a joint tax return, how do I report my information?

In this case, only YOUR portion of the income tax return exemptions, taxes paid and income should be reported.

Back to top [29]

What is the EFC, and how is it used in determining my financial aid?

The US Department of Education, which processes the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), determines your Expected Family Contribution (EFC) by analyzing the income and asset data reported on your FAFSA. The EFC represents an the amount of money you and your family are expected to contribute toward educational expenses for the academic year before you can be considered for need-based aid. Do not mistake your EFC with your out of pocket expense; the amount you actually pay may differ.

For example, if your FAFSA has an EFC of zero, that does not necessarily mean you will have no out of pocket expenses for your educational costs. It means that you are eligible to receive the maximum amount of need-based financial aid for which you qualify without your family having to contribute to the cost of attendance first. If you have an EFC of 1000, then your family would be expected to contribute $1000 to your cost of attendance before your need based financial aid eligibility could be determined.

The EFC does not necessarily have to be paid directly by you and your family; it can be satisfied through loan programs, such as the Direct Parent PLUS loan.

What is verification?

Verification is a part of the Federal Student Aid Programs requirements-34 CFR 668.56.

Verification uses documentation to confirm that the information provided on your Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is correct. The federal government requires colleges and universities to verify, or confirm, the data reported by students and their parent(s) on the FAFSA. The verification process ensures that eligible students receive all the federal financial aid to which they are entitled and prevents ineligible students from receiving financial aid for which they do not qualify. The items being reviewed include:

- Household size
- Number in College
- Adjusted Gross Income
- Untaxed Income
- Supplemental Nutritional Assistance Program Benefits (often called Food Stamps)

The main reasons for being selected for verification include that you were chosen randomly, the FAFSA you submitted was incomplete, your FAFSA contains estimated information, or the data you provided on the FAFSA is inconsistent. Verification is a federal regulation; if you are selected for verification, you must comply with all requests for documentation from the financial aid office. Failure to comply will result in termination of his financial aid eligibility.

Back to top [29]

How long will the verification process take?

Keep in mind that during our peak processing times of late spring and summer, verification can take up to 40 business days to be completed once all documentation has been submitted. If you are selected for verification, it would be in your best interest to start the process as soon as possible.

Back to top [29]

How do I know if my application is selected for verification?

The comments on your SAR (Student Aid Report) will indicate whether your application is selected for the verification process.

Back to top [29]

What you should do if selected for verification?

You may be selected for verification either by the federal processor (US Dept. of Education) or by the Office of Financial Aid. If you are selected for verification by the federal processor, there will be an asterisk next to your Expected Family Contribution (EFC) on your Student Aid Report (SAR). You will also be informed of having been selected for verification in the SAR Acknowledgement letter, which will be included with your SAR documents. You can view your SAR online at www.fafsa.gov [41] under Step 3, View and Print Your Student Aid Report. You should also receive a copy of your SAR at the email address you provided on your FAFSA application approximately 3 to 4 days after you submit your FAFSA application.

Back to top [29]

How will I know the verification process is complete?

You will receive a corrected Student Aid Report from the U.S. Department of Education as well as an email from the Office of Financial Aid notifying you we have completed the verification process

If you are asked to submit any additional documents, please submit these documents ASAP. It is your responsibility to make sure that your financial aid status is OK.
